New York, April, 2008 – Prosperity, the personal finance and lifestyle site for women, welcomes Chartered Retirement Planning Counselorsm Katherine Wahlberg of Ameriprise as a regular columnist.

As her title indicates, Ms. Wahlberg is a certified financial advisor with Ameriprise – America’s largest financial planning company, with more than 10,000 advisors, and 2.8 million individual, business and institutional clients worldwide.

“I’m very excited to have this opportunity to help even more people – especially women, who are traditionally underserved when it comes to their finances,” says Ms Wahlberg.

Katherine Wahlberg graduated from Franklin and Marshall with a B.A.; she also holds a Master of Arts in Decorative Arts History from The Bard Graduate Center for the Study of Decorative Arts, Design and Culture. Prior to joining Ameriprise in 2005, she was a freelance researcher and project manager helping auction houses, museums, and private collectors prepare for sales, special exhibitions, and special projects within their collections, counting institutions like Yale University Art Gallery, American Decorative Arts Department and Sotheby’s New York as her clients. Despite a hectic career as a financial advisor, Ms. Wahlberg remains active in the Decorative Arts world, having just published “Cornelius Kierstede, Colonial Silversmith” in the January 2008 issue of The Magazine Antiques.

“Katherine’s a great addition to our site,” says Tara Gravel, the Executive Editor for Prosperity. “She’s not only a well qualified financial professional, but, with her diverse background, she reflects our mission – that through a holistic approach of mind, heart and wallet, we can help women realize the power that they and their money have.”
